OIL IN GILEAD. This pool of crude oil, estimated to contain up to 10,000 barrels, was discovered on the Mason farm in Gilead Sunday morning. The cause was found to be a weakened gasket in a gate valve on the Portland-Montreal oil pipe line, which passes through the hollow where the pool formed. The first oil was pumped past this point in the line Saturday afternoon and at the time the leak was discovered it is said the oil filled the pipe to Gorham. The small pond sank into the gravel rapidly and Monday apparatus was set up which pumped the balance of the oil back into the big pipe.

TOOT! TOOT! TOOT!

The fall season of the Bethel Band is beginning this Sunday evening at Locke Mills as guests of the church at 7 o'clock. It always gives the players a greater amount of "oomp" and "pep" when our town's people make a special effort to be present. Let's see you there.

We have many new ideas in mind for this season and with your hard work in ours we should have many pleasant and profitable activities in the future.

There are about 30 members in our band at the present time and anyone who would like to join us we would be very pleased to welcome you as a member. Please see our president right away so that you may get in on these good times which are starting right away.

We are waiting to serve any organization in Bethel and vicinity any evening this winter. With the new line of music which is being worked upon, we should be able to give you a "bang-up" good concert. "You'll be hearing us."

THIS WEEK IN DEFENSE

Summarizing Information on the Important Developments of the Week Made Available by Official Sources

The President, speaking by radio, said "The choice we have to make is this: Shall we make full sacrifices now, produce to the limit, and deliver our products today and every day to the battlefronts of the entire world? Or shall we remain satisfied with our present rate of armament out-put, postponing the day of real sacrifice as did the French until it is too late?"

"The first," the President said, "is the choice of realism—realism in terms of three shifts a day; the fullest use of every vital machine every minute of every day and every night; staying on the job and getting things made, and entrusting industrial grievances to the established machinery of collective bargaining. The second choice is the approach of the blind... for there is still plenty of time."

And their tombstones would bear the legend "Too late"...

In a statement issued regarding the Defense Week November 11-16, the President said "Each and every citizen as a civilian must do his share for defense... We must halt the waste and unnecessary use of critical materials required for defense. We must work longer, harder. And each of us must be trained in some task that is essential to our total defense..."

Lend-Lease Aid

The President arranged a $1,000,000 loan to Russia under the Lend-Lease Act. The loan carries no interest. Repayment, partly in materials, will start five years after the war ends and is to be completed in 10 years from that time. Observing the 24th anniversary of the Soviet revolution, the President telegraphed the Soviet Government "I am confident that the sacrifices and sufferings of those who have had the courage to struggle against aggression will not have been in vain."

The Navy authorized construction of 50 escort vessels for transfer to Great Britain under the Lend-Lease Act at a cost of $380,000,000. The State Department announced a lend-lease agreement with Cuba involving an undisclosed amount of U. S. defense supplies for that country and supplies of sugar, tobacco and manganese in return.

Other Foreign Relations

State Secretary Hull announced the U. S. transmitted to Finland a peace offer from the Soviet Union with the advice that Finland must give evidence of willingness to discontinue military operations against Russia if Finland wishes to keep U. S. friendship. Mr. Hull also announced that if Germany does not now pay $2,000,000 damages for sinking the ROBIN MOORE, the team would be grouped with other pending cases for adjustment after the war. The President told a press conference the U. S. is considering withdrawing Marine detachments from China. Japan dispatched a special envoy to the U. S. for further discussion of Far Eastern problems.

Ships Attacked

The Navy announced the U. S. S. GALINER, Navy oil tanker, reached port safely and without loss of life despite serious damage from a torpedo the night of October 29-30 while in a convoy near Ireland. The Navy revised its list of casualties on the REUBEN JAMES to show two known dead and 98 missing and given up for dead. The vessel was torpedoed while convoying near Ireland. There were 45 survivors.

Navy Strengthened

The President transferred the entire Coast Guard to the Navy Department and asked Congress for an additional $440,820,000 for the Navy. The Coast Guard transfer gave the Navy 220 patrol and auxiliary vessels and a large number of inshore and port craft.

Ships Building

The Navy reported that during the first 10 months of 1941 keels were laid for 115 new combatant ships. 31 ships were launched and 25 ships were commissioned. The Maritime Commission reported the first three Liberty cargo ships will be delivered the week of November 18. The Commission has so far launched 148 new ships and delivered 118 as result of its long-range and emergency program.

MAN FROM MARS?

MINDFUL of the disadvantage to which their shortage of motorized infantry put them in Flanders last year, the British are hard at work developing new types of fast-moving, hard-hitting scout troops. This member of the famous Grenadier Guards, one of Britain's crack regiments, has been equipped with a "tommy gun" mounted right on his heavy motorcycle frame. If invasion comes, he will be able to ride into action at a 50-mile clip, blazing away without ever having to dismount.

Army Progress

The War Department reported the rate of delivery of critical armament and ammunition to the Army by June, 1942 will be 360 times the rate during May, 1940 when $1,000,000 worth was delivered. The rate, the Department said, increased 40 times by June of this year, 60 times by September, and 80 times by October. The Army also announced an increase in the rate of training of times, battalion commanders and motor maintenance officers by four communications officers by 100 percent, and aircraft warning service men by 900 percent. The Army also reported the rate of accidents in military flying during the past year remained unchanged despite greatly increased training and fac-

Fuel Coordinator

The President appointed Interior Secretary Ickes to coordinate information regarding solid fuels (coal, coke, wood, etc.) as well as oil and to make recommendations to the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board as to production, storage, transportation, marketing and other phases of the relationship of fuels to the defense program. The SPAB refused priority assistance for construction of a pipeline from East Texas to Bayonne, N. J., and said its action "constituted a final disapproval." Mr. Ickes announced 15 U. S. oil tankers were released from British service during October and 25 more will be released this month.

Power

The President asked Congress for $30,000,000 for additional power facilities in the Bonneville power system because "a critical power shortage in this area is now imminent." The OPM postponed from November 10 to November 17 the planned 30 percent power curtailment for non-defense industries in six Southern States.

Prices

Price Administrator Henderson asked heating and cooking stove manufacturers not to increase prices above October 24 levels and radios-phonograph combination manufacturers not to increase prices above October 15 levels. He said price programs are being formulated for both industries. The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill which would freeze apartment house and hotel rents in the District of Columbia as they were on January 1, 1941.

Materials

Lessing J. Rosenwald, Chief of the OPM Bureau of Industrial Conservation, announced the Government will soon begin a series of continuous campaigns to seek out unneeded household rubber, iron, aluminum, paper, steel, copper (which OPM said was more scarce than any other needed material), lead, zinc and cotton and wool. In the new campaigns materials would be given outright or sold to scrap and junk dealers who would resell to defense industries. Price Administrator Henderson reported 400,000 members of Boys' Clubs of America in 360 cities are enlisting in the nation's wastepaper salvage campaign now underway.

Labor Disputes

The President's fact finding board set up to adjust a wage dispute in the railroad industry recommended that approximately 350,000 members of the "Big Five" Operating Brotherhoods receive an increase of 7 1/2 percent. The Brotherhoods had asked for a 30 percent increase for these men. For 200,000 other employees the board recommended an increase averaging 13 1/2 percent. The increases were termed by the board as temporary pending a re-examination of economic conditions in 1943. The railroads accepted the proposals. The unions rejected them.

The U. S. Conciliation Service reported settlement of 36 labor disputes.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

COSTUME PICTURES

Costumes—real or makeshift—make delightful snapshots, either humorous or serious. Try an evening of costume snaps—you'll have some genuine camera fun.

HOW many costume pictures in your snapshot album—pictures of the children all dressed up for a party, or other members of the family in the costumes of a bygone era or another country?

Such shots are easy to arrange—easy to take—and a source of much camera fun. They're easy, because the costumes don't have to be elaborate or durable. For snapshot purposes, you can use all sorts of substitute materials and methods—pins instead of stitching, lace paper instead of real lace, and so forth. Some of the most clever costumes can be put together in a few minutes.

These makeshift costumes are successful because the camera is easily fooled. Pins in the back don't show—and substitute materials can appear just as natural as the real thing. If some part of the costume is too obviously "faked," you simply adjust the light so it is in half-shadow. This subdues the obtrusive details.

Children enjoy the taking of costume pictures—and so do grown-ups. Chances are, if you will rummage around in the attic trunks, you will find plenty of material for an evening of fun. Coats, dresses, collars, and hats that you wore eight or ten years ago—these are splendid for the purpose. It's surprising how "dated" the styles become in only a few years—you'll find them truly comic.

For foreign costumes, various materials can be pressed into service—such as an old shawl, stray pieces of cloth from the workbasket, crepe paper, and plenty of pins. Just to illustrate—crepe paper, folded and gathered, makes a fine neck ruff for a Spanish don or an Elizabethan dandy. Your dictionary, encyclopedia, and other books will illustrate many costumes that are fun to reproduce.

Try an evening of costume snapshots. Gather a few materials—enlist members of the family as models—and you'll add some worthwhile pictures to your collection.

SEARCH FOR LOST PERSONS

predominates as news in this column. The latest case involves Peter Torrick of Berlin, N. H., 23 year old hunter who became lost in

Thirteen Mile Woods, Monday,

November 3. Tuesday evening

Mayor Tondreau of Berlin appealed to the Ranger for aid. The Ranger dispatched Foreman Earle Roberts of Peabody Camp to help organize a searching party of Berlin residents. Roberts was especially well qualified, having had charge of all hazard reduction work in Coos

County under New England Fire

Emergency Funds.

During this time however use of the Berlin Fire Chief's car traveling through the Thirteen Mile Woods area, sounding its siren at intervals, had brought results. A gun shot was heard after one of the siren blasts. It was later found that this was Torrick's last cartridge. The searchers finally found him about 1 1/2 miles from the road in good physical condition but much bewildered and in possession of a fine eight-point buck which he had tried to get through a big swamp which separated him from the road but had only traveled in circles.

The warning to be gathered from this episode is that every person entering the woods should carry a compass and know how to use it.

The best of guides and woodsmen are available.

INSTALLATION OF LIGHT-

NING PROTECTION SYSTEM on the Tuckerman Ravine Shelter is now under way. The work is being done by several of the guards under the direction of Forest Guard

Robert B. Smith. For the past several days the guards have had a respite from their regular duties in the lookout towers and the Ranger has had an opportunity to catch up on some of the maintenance work on the district. The lightning protection system being installed is similar to that used at the lookout towers, which has proved very effective in preventing lightning strikes.

Shirley Temple
Watch for her

Traditionally, 13 is an unlucky number but to Shirley Temple, aged 13, it's anything but. Shirley has just signed her first radio series contract which will net her $50,000 for four Christmas broadcasts starting Dec. 5, 10:00 p. m. EST over CBS. An American watchmaker is the sponsor.

Ben Lyon, the movie star, who Clipped to England recently for a killing series of six-day war relief shows in the provinces, was talking with Archdale J. Jones, of the British-American Ambulance Corps, and telling how tired he felt. Jones handed him a vitamin-and-mineral tablet. "It's what you need, Ben," said Jones. "I'll pep you up." Lyon, bewildered, asked what was in the tablet. Jones began reciting. "Vitamins A, B1, B2, PP, C & D, and iron, calcium, phosphorus—" Lyon didn't wait any longer. He headed for the nearest drugstore. When Lyon left for England with his wife, Bebe Daniels, they took along 500 tablets.

Bill Johnstone, lively grey-haired New York actor, was dining in a Manhattan cafe recently. When he got up to leave, his hat was gone. A protracted search failed to uncover it. Everybody laughed. Nobody sympathized, but it wasn't because Johnstone isn't well-liked. It's because professionally he ought to keep track of his hat. He's radio's ace detective and crime detector, the popular Shadow, heard Sundays at 5:30 p. m. NYT over Mutual.

The Shadow Knows
But his hat's gone

Louella Parsons is advising all the stars in Hollywood to take up sewing, knitting and crocheting. Her friends from England write her that these are the most relaxing hobbies in addition to being most useful in times like these.

This advice calls to mind an incident which happened on her Hollywood Premiere program. During a rehearsal lull, a young lady sat crocheting. She was so expert, one of the supporting players asked to be taught. The pretty crocheter was most affable. When at last the director called the cast together, the pupil thanked her teacher. "By the way, what's your name?" she asked. "Call me Joan," said the crocheter. "Joan Bennett."

Put Arnold Stang down as the radio best bet of the year . . . kid was discovered recently by Director Don Bernard when Bernard hired him to do the commercial on CBS' Meet Mr. Meek program, Wednesdays, 7:30 p. m. EST. In a voice crackling between soprano and bass, Arnold vowed the Meek cast with his reading. When Bernard decided such a comedy reading would hurt the Meek commercial he substituted another youngster and ordered Meek script writers to think up a role for Arnold. Stang is now a permanent member of the Meek program.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Six men traveled the Hudson river trail in the wilds of northern Canada. Six men died. They were reported drowned in the rapids. Murders around the camp fires expressed other things. Garry Finlay, whose brother Bob was one of the six, Red Malone and Blaise, a half-breed guide, in the case of survivors, arrive to investigate the deaths. Finlay received an anonymous letter warning that the men were murdered. There is a suspicion that Isadore, big fur man, has made an important gold strike on the Waswanipi country and will stop at nothing to keep prospectors out.

CHAPTER II—The inhabitants are in terror of Isadore and his right-hand man, Tete-Blanche.

CHAPTER III—On the second day out, as they had safely passed the worst of the rapids, the three investigators were ambushed from shore. Garry and Blaise were slightly wounded.

CHAPTER IV—From Indians Blaise learned ten days later that there is much excitement among them over a "bird" from the south, and that there is talk that three men perished in the rapids.

CHAPTER V—Finlay and Malone visit Isadore in his magnificent home. A sly attempt to poison them is frustrated by a clever trick by Malone.

CHAPTER VI—Wabistan, chief of the Montagnais, tells Finlay that the six men who lost their lives on the Waswanipi were shot, and talks of a "bird" that makes a loud noise.

CHAPTER VII—Wabistan shows Finlay the grave of his brother Bob. Garry confirms the remains and notes the absence of a ring that Bob always wore. Garry learns that Tete-Blanche is hunting him.

CHAPTER VIII—The Indians have been stirred up to believe that the survivors' transit is an "evil eye" that is causing sickness among their children. Finlay gets a note from Lise, daughter of Isadore, with whom he has fallen in love, imploring him to help her escape from Isadore, whom she fears. Garry is a decoy.

CHAPTER IX—Garry meets Lise in response to her appeal. He is surrounded and knocked unconscious by Isadore's men after killing three of them.

CHAPTER X—Garry recovers consciousness and finds himself suffering from insect bites. The dog, Flame, chews through the leather thong and releases him. Later he is found by Malone and Blaise.

CHAPTER XI—Finlay receives a note from Lise imploring her assistance. He is anxious to go but his life depends upon his leaving the country at once.

CHAPTER XII—The three men visit the Montagnais. They meet and greet the trader, McNab, tell him of their mission, and that they really are Northwest Mounted police. Malone falls in love with Thelma McNab.

CHAPTER XIII—Finlay, Malone and Blaise ride to the last water landing or river at the post. They overtake him after attack in his company in return for his help in understanding the police.

CHAPTER XIV—Later they land on an island and are attacked by Indians under the influence of whiskey supplied by Tete-Blanche.

CHAPTER XV—Lise and her mother are deeply concerned over the intentions of Isadore toward the police party. Lise receives a note from Garry telling her to make preparations for her escape.

CHAPTER XVI—A medicine man performs his trickery before an assemblage of Indians and urges them to kill the white men.

CHAPTER XVII

Later that night, when Wabistan's canoe found the hidden camp of the police, the eyes of the old Indian glittered with triumph.

"You not hurt?" he asked, squinting into the faces of his friends as they wrung his hand.

"Not a scratch, chief!" Red patted the old man's shoulder.

"I'm glad we got clear of that canoe without using our guns," said Finlay. "Too many men have been shot here this summer."

"But it was their lives or ours, Garry. Tete-Blanche and his whiskey-fed crew would snuff us out as they would a candle!"

"I know, but headquarters may not see it that way. I'm sorry it had to be done."

With Flame and young Patamish, who was devoted to Finlay and would be useful as a scout, the Peterboro started at once through the islands, hugging the shadows of the western shores for the moon was now low on the ridge.

Once they cleared the islands the rhythmic "churn-swish" of four paddles never ceased until dawn caught them far down the great lake. And throughout the long hours, Finlay had been accompanied by fear for Lise Demarais. He would send Patamish at once in the birch-bark they had left at the hidden camp with a message for her to come at night to the islands opposite the post. It would not be long now before he'd have her in his arms—safe.

The following night they reached their old camp and Patamish started with Finlay's message. Before dawn Garry was waked by something pulling at his blanket.

"Patamish!" whispered the boy.

"I find dis undair stone."

Finlay's hand shook as he took the note, lit a candle lantern and read:

"Dearest:

"It has seemed so long—this waiting for you. Blondell is expected now, any day. Everyone except Jules and Labelle are at the head of the lake. I tried to learn what was happening there, but could not. They haven't returned. Jules is drinking hard. Corinne heard him tell Labelle that if you saw that plane arrive from the North and got away with the information, the jig was up. I don't understand for he knows that people in Montreal suspect he's carrying gold south by plane. That's no secret. I've tried to avoid him but he cornered me last night and said: 'You'll never see your friend again. He's walked into a trap, noosing around this lake. We'll take care of him this time. So, when Felix comes, you'd better agree to marry him. He's got plenty stowed away in Montreal—can give you anything you want. If you won't be reasonable, you can take the consequences.'"

"Dearest, I'll not stay a day after that plane arrives. I'll take Lous and camp somewhere in the bush. Send for me! Oh, send for me! Let me know, quick, that nothing happened to you! With all my love, 'Lise'."

"You want to the post to find Malone?" asked Finlay. "I could find the drumbeat of his heart in his throat."

"Ah-hah! Malone was gone. Something strange was done, on de water!"

"On the water?" The news he dreaded hit Finlay like the chill of ice. "What was it?"

"Beeg caps" was what he called it. In his remembrance, Finlay turned Lise's note in his hand. Blondell's plane had crashed! What?

He found a scrap of paper and wrote:

"Just got your note! I'll wait at the nearest island, tonight, tomorrow and every night following, for your canoe. Courage! I love you! 'Garry'."

That night, before the twilight died, Finlay and Red lay in the thick alders of the shore of the island opposite Isadore's with binoculars focused on the anchored sea-plane and the post. Later, lights, like stars, glowed in the trade-house and the living quarters. The lights died. Hour after hour the two men waited. But Lise did not come.

"She'll come tonight, Garry. Don't worry."

"Somehow we've got to learn why that plane comes here from James Bay before we go after Isadore."

"We know she carries fake gold and nuggets from the river bars when she finally heads south. Isadore admitted that to McNab, at Matagami."

"Get shot for our pains and, besides, spoil the whole show? No, I'm going to learn more about that plane from the Bay first. We can't arrest Isadore without a gun fight."

"Very good, Garry. Finlay! What are the orders?" laughed Red.

"You'll get them, constable, when that plane shows up."

*****

At daylight the faint hum of a plane's engine brought the police from their hidden camp to the shore. Far across the lake, above Isadore's, they saw a sea-plane spiraling for altitude.

The plane started for the outlet, twenty miles to the west, and, later appeared following the south shore.

"Tete-Blanche is back with the news and they're out for revenge," said Red. "They'll make it hot for us, now."

The plane passed overhead following the lake shore and the concealed police could see a man leaning from the cockpit searching the shore below with glasses. Shortly it faded into the east.

"It's the middle of August, Red. That plane from the Bay is due."

That night they waited on the shore of the island for Lise's canoe. Hour after hour drifted past but through the murk came no welcome sound of a paddle prying off a gunwale.

Finlay slouched on a stone, head in hands. What had happened to her? She had said she wouldn't stay a day after the plane arrived. She had begged him to send for her. She had had two days to get the note. What had happened to Lise?

He looked at the illuminated face of his watch. It was one o'clock. They had waited five hours. "She won't come tonight, Red," he said, rising.

"No, she won't—!" Malone did not finish.

"Hear something?"

"Didn't you? It was pretty faint—might have been a loon!"

The two men stood rigid—with checked breaths.

They paddled hard for a minute, then stopped to listen. Suddenly out of the gloom, ahead, wavered the cry: "Gar-reel Gar-reel Help!"

Eyes stabbing the gloom in search of the crippled canoe, the two men approached the sound.

"Where are you, Lise? Where's your boat?"

"Here I am—here!" There was a faint splash off the bow of the canoe and Finlay's straining eyes caught the dim outlines of a head and bare shoulder.

"Hold it, Red!" he cried. "She's here—swimming! Steady the boat while I get her!"

"But your canoe? Why did you try to swim it?"

"I had to swim! They hid the canoe! I—I couldn't stay! I thought I'd never make it!" She shivered in his arms as he kissed her wet face and hair. He wrapped his coat around her bare shoulders, his blood singing at the touch of her body.

"Why did you do it? It was too—"

"Because I love you!" she whispered, while Red paddled hard for the camp.

"Oh, my dear! My dear!" murmured Garry, shielding her body with his own from the night air. "I've worried so—been half mad!"

"It was too terrible, there! They're drinking and worried! I had to threaten to shoot Blondell. He wouldn't let me alone. Miksis has disappeared. I got your note this morning—went for it myself. They've taken my canoe and hid the others. I had to swim to you, sweetheart. Do you mind my coming in my bathing suit?"

His arms tightened around her. "Mind? I love it, beautiful!"

"You seem lost!" she laughed up at him. "Then she called out to me I chose thoughts were far away at Matagami as he drove his long paddle. "Not going to speak, Mr. Malone?"

"It's Red to you, Lise! If you knew how glad I am to have you here! We've been pretty worried! I want to say they don't come any gamer than you!"

"Thanks, Red!"

Blaise stared open-mouthed as Garry led a girl wearing his coat over a one-piece bathing suit up to the fire.

"Blaise, this is Lise. We picked her out of the lake, swimming to the island."

"You swim—in de dark?" demanded the astounded Brassard. "By gar, you are brave girl! Tiens! She swim from Isadore's in dis black night?"

"Yes," said Finlay proudly. "Now hop into the tent, Lise, and crawl into my service tugs while we start the fire and get some tea and soup going."

Shortly the group of men smoking by the fire burst into laughter. Shift in front of the tent with hand at salute stood a mounted Policeman.

"So you're Mounties? I've wondered what you really were. Jules Isadore has been wondering, too. He's pretty worried about it. Now that I've fallen into the hands of the police, what am I charged with?" she laughed.

"You are charged with the felony of scaring two policemen half to death by swimming to this island, young woman."

"I had to." For a space her face was serious, then a smile broke through as Finlay handed her a steaming cup of tea.

The others left Lise and Garry by the fire while she told him her story. "Since Felix Blondell came it's been hellish, Garry. They do nothing at night but drink and quarrel. I've learned what I could from Corinne. She's absolutely petrified. When Tete-Blanche returned, Jules was mad with rage at what happened. It seems Kinebik is dead. Did you know that?"

Garry's arm tightened about her waist. "Yes, I know it."

"Well, Tete-Blanche brought back a lot of drunken young Indians to hunt for you. Blondell is getting scared. He wants to return south. He told Corinne he was not in favor of what had been done. He says Jules has ruined the whole business by giving whiskey to the Indians. It's too dangerous. I avoided him—always carried my pistol. One night I had to fire it—to scare him. After that he was afraid of me."

"Good! Too bad you didn't shoot straighter!"

"They're anxious about that plane from the Bay. It's over the lake. They think, now, that that's what you came here for—to get that plane. Corinne asked Blondell if that was the plane that carried the gold south and he looked at her queerly and said: 'Yes, it carries the gold. That's what these people are here for, to highjack it. But we've got enough men here to shoot them out of their canoes if they try that.' Garry, you're not going to try to take Isadore—just you three, are you? He's got a lot of Indians over there and he's desperate."

He drew her red-coated shape close and kissed the velvet eyes that searched his bronzed face. "Don't worry about that, Lise. You don't think I'm going to risk losing you when I've only just got you here—safe?"

Jack Haines of Boston spoke briefly on the advantages of owning such bonds, and then introduced the three remaining speakers who were Glendon McAllister of Bethel, Rachel Gordon of Lewiston. Each pupil spoke briefly concerning our obligations and the worth of these bonds. The sale of stamps starts next week under the supervision of the Commercial Department.

During assembly period Wednesday morning, Robert Bateman spoke on the preamble of the constitution stressing that part which mentions common defense and our personal liberties. He also pointed out that if we are to maintain this fine government we must defend it both physically and spiritually, and that for every one of the liberties we have there is a very definite obligation and duty.

Wednesday night there was held the first open house of Gould Academy at which time all the classes were in regular session. In addition to the regular classes, there were exhibits in the Physics, Chemistry, Manual Arts, and Home Economics laboratories, as well as regular classes in the two athletic buildings. The special feature of the evening was a lecture of current affairs by Pitt Parker of Boston. Mr. Parker illustrates his lectures with cartoons and crayon drawings which prove very entertaining and instructive.

Rehearsals will start today for the comedy drama, "The Night of January 16th," which the Senior Class of Gould Academy have chosen for their production this year. organization we will be able to help answer questions which students raise.

Science Research Associates was set up by a group of prominent educators for the specific purpose of serving as a national clearing house for information on vocational trends and job opportunities for youth. Their materials provide students with information that is helpful in selecting an occupation and getting a job. More than 8,000 schools throughout the country are now using these new materials and methods.

Special attention is called to Vocational Trends, a monthly magazine which highlights new developments in job trends. Current articles feature the effects of the national defense program and war in Europe on jobs in America. Vocational Trends, however, is but one of six methods used to cover the field of occupations. In addition to the magazine, a new monograph covering a particularly significant field is provided monthly. Newest of these monographs is one on Military Occupations which analyzes the training possibilities in the various branches of the defense services. The Vocational Guide, a third publication, lists all the significant literature on jobs as it is published. Ways and means of attacking the job problem effectively through school and community action are provided in the Basic Occupational Plans published quarterly. A Research Service, through which requests by teachers and students for special information are filled, is also a feature of the service.

The use of this service is another step forward in the school's attempt to help young people with their important problem—that of choosing and preparing for their life work. Edmond Vachon will administer this work.

The Guidance Department has already met the Juniors and Seniors of the College Preparatory Course and talked with them concerning their choice of colleges and their future plans. Each student has filled out their own individual questionnaire, and all colleges have been contacted that were mentioned by the students. The Guidance Department will also start its work with all the pupils of the school tomorrow and the first group will take the Kuder Vocational Preference tests. The object of this test is to determine as objectively as possible the interests of the pupils and thus enable the pupils to find the field of endeavor wherein lies their greatest natural interest. The Guidance Department of the school is accumulating very valuable information which has been very carefully filed in means convenient for the pupils to use. Any student seeking vocational or educational guidance is urged to make use of our facilities and to consult our vocational director, Edmond Vachon, at any time.

The finals in the class hockey series was won by the Sophomore girls, and the Interclass hockey tournament by the Freshman girls.
